

Andrea Davis,
Dodge City Learn & Play Facilitator

Andrea has had a passion for working with children as well as studying human development and behavior since her teenage years. She holds degrees in biology and psychology as well as a Master of Science in Physical Therapy. Andrea has experience working with all ages of children in the clinical setting at the hospital's outpatient therapy clinic in Dodge City as well as in her local church while teaching Sunday school, children's church, and Vacation Bible School. Andrea has been a facilitator with the Learn and Play Program for nine years and enjoys using her creative side to provide quality activities for children and their caregivers to engage in. She also loves encouraging and helping families support the development of their children so they can flourish and reach their potential in all domains. Andrea enjoys practicing physical therapy part-time, exercising and staying active with her three children, being involved at her church, and hiking with her family.

Jan Linsenmeyer,
Dodge City Learn & Play
Facilitator

I graduated from college with a degree in elementary education, which I put to use teaching kindergarten for 9 years in Dodge City and coaching toddlers to preteens at a local gymnastics gym. From there I became a stay-at-home mom who is now in the field of teaching again, this time by homeschooling my own children. I am currently approaching my 4th year of facilitating Learn and Play. This program has been a great creative outlet for me to continue to use my knowledge of how children develop and learn as well as letting me connect with many wonderful families in our community! I love getting to watch our kids gain new skills and getting to build those relationships with both parents and children. In my free time, you will most likely find me spending time with my husband and three children, attending class at the CrossFit gym, or taking a nap.
